

In Tune Terms and Conditions (music tuition)

Why terms and conditions?

I believe this is a way to clarify our agreement; to make clear exactly what we agree and look at the “what ifs”. I see this as a way to avoid misunderstanding and unnecessary indignation.

This agreement is for you as a music student. I will make different agreements for my courses, conduction, concerts and composing.

My student quota is filling up and I am therefore only having half-hour lessons with the possibility of having 45 minutes if so is requested and motivated. My price is £21 for 45 minutes and £14 for half an hour.

I do accept more than one student at the same time. I am however going to add an extra pound per person. This is due to extra planning and record keeping.

I case of ...

If you cancel your lesson in good time (24 hours or more before to the lesson) I will not charge you anything.

If you fail to notify me within 24 hours prior to the lesson I am going to charge you £5 as this means I will not have the time to get another student in.

If you don't turn up to a lesson I will charge you the full price.

If you forget to bring money you can pay me next time (if you come on a regular basis, i.e. once every fortnight at least). If you still have not brought any money the next time I am going to put the lessons on hold until your debts are cleared. If you don't come for any more lessons the debt will be chased.

If you arrive late for a lesson I will charge you the full amount anyway. If I am late, the whole lesson will be free of charge.

You can stop being my student at any time (as long as you are not booked for another lesson). I also have the right to stop being your teacher. I will however need to give you at least one months notice and it would be nice if you could do me the same honour.

Lancaster 11/10/11

Fredrik Holm